四、阅读理解:本大题共 10 小题,每小题 2 分,共 20 分。

本部分有两篇短文,每篇短文后有五个问题,每个问题有四个选项,请选择一个最佳答案,并将答题纸的相应代码涂黑。错涂、多涂或未涂均无分。

Passage 1

People often define themselves by the things they care about and enjoy doing. What exactly is the difference between a passion and a hobby? Usually, people both care about and enjoy their passions and their hobbies. The distinction between the two can make a big difference in the way a person thinks about how he spends his time.

Collins Dictionary lists ten definitions for “passion”. The one that applies here is “an object of desire or deep interest”. “Object” doesn’t necessarily mean “thing”; instead, this is “object” in its grammatical sense, as in the object of a verb. Your passion is something that you care about intensely or that you find very interesting.

By contrast, Collins defines a hobby as “a pursuit outside one’s regular occupation especially for relaxation.” In other words, a hobby is something you do for fun. There are as many examples of hobbies as there are types of people. People may enjoy reading, playing sports, bird-watching, collecting stamps, riding motorcycles, painting, cooking or gardening. All of these things are hobbies, and this list is far from exhaustive.

So what is the difference between a passion and a hobby? A hobby can be casual, while a passion cannot. A hobby is for relaxation and not for income. Passions are consuming, while hobbies are not.

56. Collins Dictionary gives _____ definitions for “passion”.

- A. she cares about dancing so much                      B. she will lose her passion for dancing
- C. she can be very exhausted                      D. she dances not for income
60. According to the writer, there are mainly _____ distinctions between hobbies and passions.
- A. numerous                      B. one                      C. two                      D. three

Passage 2

The subtle smile of the “Mona Lisa” has attracted the art world for more than 500 years. But does it belong to an entirely different woman?

French scientist Pascal Cotte, after his study of a decade, says he has revealed three hidden paintings beneath the surface of Leonardo da Vinci’s masterpiece—one of which is likely to be the real portrait of Lisa del Giocondo, the woman thought to be the subject of the painting.

The scientist used a special camera to project intense lights on to the painting while measuring the reflections. This helps expose what happened between the paint layers.

The hidden picture shows a woman looking into the distance, with no trace of the characteristic smile. Cotte believes he has discovered the real portrait of Lisa del Giocondo, who, instead of being the wife of a Florentine merchant, was actually the wife of a silk merchant. But some historians used to think it was really a painting of a Medici woman.

Cotte said in a statement. “The results change our vision of Leonardo’s masterpiece forever.”

Art historian Martin Kemp was doubtful, despite recognizing Cotte’s techniques as “highly innovative,” he told CNN.

61. What does Pascal Cotte find by his study of a decade?
- A. The Mona Lisa is Leonardo da Vinci's most famous painting.
B. There are several layers of paintings behind the surface.
C. The Mona Lisa we see today does not smile at all.
